OKLAHOMA CITY -- An investigator for the Oklahoma County prosecutor's office testified for the second time Friday before the county grand jury investigating alleged conspiracy theories in the Oklahoma City bombing.

Larry Dellinger, investigator for the grand jury that convened June 30, was the 12th and final witness called before the six-man, six-woman panel last week.

At least six people have been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jurors this week, The Daily Oklahoman reported Saturday. The jury resumes work Monday.

Among those expected to testify, the Oklahoman reported, is Georgia Rucker, a Herington, Kan., real estate agent who sold bombing defendant Terry Nichols his house in Herington. She also reported seeing a yellow Ryder truck at Geary Lake, between Junction City and Herington.

Mike Moroz, an Oklahoma City tire-shop employee who has said two men in a Ryder truck asked him for directions to the Murrah Building minutes before the explosion, said he will testify.
